June 2005

Located in northern Montana, Toole County is Montana's 34th most populous with 5,094 residents, according to the 2004 Census Bureau estimates. Shelby, the county seat, is the state's 24th largest city with a population of 3,306, according to the 2003 Census Bureau estimates.

The Port of Sweetgrass, 35 miles north of Shelby, is the major port of entry on the Alaska-Canada highway. It's the busiest port between eastern Washington and central North Dakota. As homeland security continues to be a focal point, federal employment for monitoring the border will remain strong. Overall, government employment is one-third of the total county employment. (See Employment by Industry table inside.)

Oil and gas extraction and other mining activities also provide strong employment with about 11 percent of total private wages. Fritz, a UPS business, helps boost the transportation and warehousing employment to make it one of the top private industry sectors.

Agriculture is also important to the area's economy. Toole County is eighth in Montana for the largest number of oilseed and grain farms: 200 (see table on the right). The grains, oilseeds, dry beans, and dry peas category is the number two agricultural industry in Montana in terms of sales and revenues, according to the 2002 Census of Agriculture.

According to the U.S. Bureau of the Census, median income for Toole County households in 2002 was $29,338, compared to Montana's median income of $34,105 for the same year. Median income is the average per household income in the county (no matter how many people live in the home); per capita income (inside table) is total income in the county divided by the number of people in the county.

Toole County, established in 1914, is named for Joseph K. Toole, Montana's first governor. According to the Montana Almanac, by authors Andrea Merrill and Judy Jacobson, Shelby was named for Peter Shelby, a railroad executive. The authors add it became a wild boom town after the Kevin-Sunburst oil field was discovered in 1920.
